7566. In English and Latin, on paper : written by J. Ramsey, Edinburgh, in 1798 : $8\frac{1}{8} \times 5\frac{1}{4}$ in., x + 372 pages.

'Cases in the Clinical Wards of the Royal Infirmary : Edinburgh under Dr Gregory. Vol: 1', under the writer's name 'James Ramsey, Edinburgh, Nov^r 1, 1798' on fol. iii. Some cases are incomplete, the continuations being in a 2nd vol. which is not here. With index on pp. v-vii, 370-1.

This is a good picture of hospital practice in Edinburgh at the end of the 18th century. They are the notes of the house physician or possibly a clinical clerk. This MS. differs from the other Edinburgh Infirmary MSS., Rutherford's (no. 7621) and John Gregory's (no. 7568), which are notes of the clinical lectures. [W. O.]

The different parts of his body are considerably swollen at different times. — his face, hands, & belly are swollen in the morning; but his legs chiefly so in the evening. The swelling is colorless; — but the parts occupied by it do not retain the impression of the finger. He has frequent short cough, acidity, pain in the left side of the stomach, & at times in the breast, with some difficulty of breathing, particularly when he uses exercise. He is unable to lie on the left side on account of pain. He has a round spot on

2 The left side of the forehead — This last accident upon his head 6 years ago: but the head-ache did not afflict him until the attack of his present symptoms. In his business he is subject to vicissitudes of heat & cold. No remedies to-day.

Complains of great difficulty of breathing, accompanied with much pain and giddiness on full inspiration. He has frequent shifting pain in his breast & belly: much cough with difficult expectoration of a white frothy matter. After each fit of coughing he feels a great inclination to vomit. Tongue very foul & parched. Internal fauces very dry & inflamed. Pulse 110; strong & hard. Much thirst. Skin hot. Appetite impaired. Sleep bad. Bowels natural. These symptoms came on three weeks ago from exposure to cold, with a cough, with which the other symptoms have become very violent within these last eight days.

James Mac' Culloch, etat 50

Woolly (Coachman)

Complains of great debility; heaves at stomach & difficulty of breathing, attended with a tickling cough, particularly in the morning & evening, with copious white viscid expectoration. Complains also of much pain, beginning in the middle of his back, extending up to his shoulders & down. He is afflicted with frequent cold clammy sweats; thereby the continuance of which he has some pain in the joints of his elbows & knees.
Sleep frequently disturbed by starting.
Pulse about 96. Much thirst in the night. Tongue white, but moist.

 Urine high, colored, voided much oftener than natural, but in smaller quantities. Appetite impaired.
 Belly natural.

The above complaints began about twelve months since, by which he was confined to his bed the greater part of last winter. He became much better during the spring, which he attributes to some medicines he had from Dr. Duncan. He continued in tolerably good health until about three months since, when he was attacked by his present symptoms, which he attributes to exposure to cold & moisture. He has been

I am afflicted with constant dyspnoea, attended with acute pain in the left side, which prevents him from taking a full expiration. Frequent cough, with copious expectoration; which, he says, has a white frothy appearance. Bad sleep occasioned by the frequency of the cough. Pulse 105. Much thirst. Tongue clean and moist. Appetite impaired. Belly natural. The sight of the right eye is entirely destroyed by an opacity covering the whole of the cornea. And that of the left eye is also somewhat impaired by several opaque spots on the left side of the cornea of that eye. The affections of the breast began suddenly about 3 weeks since, after a night's exposure to cold; when in a state of expectation. Eight days ago he had a blister applied to his breast, which procured him ^{a dose of} some relief. On Sunday last he took ^{a dose of} which operated fully, but without any relief. The affection of his eyes began about 12 years ago; after having had the small-pox.

The glands of the right mamma are somewhat enlarged & hardened; formerly a mass about the size of a finger; & about three inches in length, which extends across the mamma. She at times feels a fatty pain in these indurated glands, stretching towards the axilla; & which she particularly describes to be much more severe than usual at the period of menstruation. The lower extremities are very much enlarged with dropsical swelling, particularly the right leg, which is also affected with erythema.
 The abdomen is also enlarged; & fluctuation can be distinctly felt.
 Her face is also much swelled; so much in the morning that she cannot raise the eye-lids for some time after she awakes. Her breathing is very difficult; she has a frequent & severe cough attended with an expectoration of a thick yellow mucus. The cough is much increased when she attempts to lie on her right side. Pulse about 120, & somewhat fable. She has had a natural diarrhoea for some days bygone.

Urine very high colored & scanty. About 18 months since the catamenia appeared for once only: & that in a slight degree.

She has been subject to Cough & expectoration from her infancy, which she says, was brought on by the hooping cough. The swellings of the limbs & other parts of the body appeared only about 2 months ago. She has taken some pills, which purged her violently, but none for the last 3 weeks. Her legs were punctured a little below the knee about that time, & there is still a discharge of 150 a thin transparent fluid from the wounds. These have a very unhealthy appearance & are probably the cause of the erythema of the right leg already described.

Five or six times in the day; & about twice as often in the night is attacked with fits of Pyrosis. These con-sist about a minute; the early food table spoonfulls of clear saliva run from his mouth during each fit. He makes efforts to swallow the saliva as it rises; but the muscles of the esophagus appear to be convulsed; & a noise is made, resembling the gurgling of a fluid, when poured hastily from a bottle. The fits are attended with a sense of suffocation, arising, as he describes it, from a lump in his throat.
Yesterday morning tremors followed the 209 fits, particularly of the head, the could not articulate distinctly for some minutes. The sensorial powers much affected. Pulse, immediately after a fit, remarkably slow, with evident & frequent intermissions. Belly rather firm.

Countenance, & functions, natural.

His complaints were renewed in about 4 months since with a febrile attack during which saliva continually flowed from his mouth. For three weeks past a greater quantity of saliva than formerly has flowed from the mouth; & the gurgling noise has been less remarkable.

23

Has passed some ascenders before the severe attack of his present complaint,

Complains of severe pain in the lower part of the breast, very much increased when she lies on her left side, or back. Her difficulty of breathing is so great, that she is frequently forced to change her position from the horizontal to the erect posture, which, she says, affords her some relief. But she does not long remain in this situation till she is again obliged to change it. She has a frequent hard, dry cough, which, when she moves about, or makes any exertion, is accompanied with haemopto--lysis.

She is also subject to severe fits of tremors, & is now ^{a week} again together free from them. Pulse 60; of natural strength. Belly brand. Spontaneous natural sleep. Her appetite is much im-paired. There is a slight swelling at the lower part of the left breast, very like one of the mammary glands placed a little lower than usual.

On the 13th inst, she received several severe kicks & blows on her left side, which caused her immediately to faint. She remained in this state an hour: after recovery she was attacked with cough, which was followed by hœmatemesis: about Complains of great difficulty of breathing, accompanied with a copious white frothy expectoration. Is unable to make the full inspiration on account of the pain which is keenly produced at the pit of the stomach, attended with a fit of coughing. can not lie on the right side from the cough which is then excited.

Pulse 66. Tongue pretty clean & moist, thirst moderate, tho' his mouth is generally dry in the morning; & has a disagreeable bitterish taste. Appetite rather impaired.
Excretions natural.

Has been afflicted with a difficulty of breathing & some cough for about 12 months last, tho they did not prevent him from following his daily occupations.

About two months ago both the cough & dyspnea were so much increased as to confine him to his bed, when he was likewise attacked with a bleedng from his nose, which continued for 11 nights, pretty constant, from 8 in the evening until 8 next morning, after which hour he had scarcely any bleedng thro' the day.

About 8 days subsequent to the cessation of epistaxis, he was bled in the arm to about ~~3~~⁷/₈; but he experienced no relief in his breathing from the bleedng either at his nose or his arm. Has taken no medicines, except about 25 drops of Landrum, which he has been in the habit of taking every night for eight days past.

Dear Sir (a widow)

Is affected with the usual symptoms of fever, which first attacked her on the 4th inst. - since which she has been confined to bed. Strength much reduced. Countenance a good deal oppressed. Tongue very dry & parched. Thirst urgent. Pulse about 80, of natural strength. Skin rather hot & dry.
No appetite. She does not remember to have had a stool since first taken ill.

Immediately after admission yesterday fell into a soporose state, from which she has been occasionally roused to take drinks; but she very soon falls asleep again. her sleep seems natural.
